Matcha Green Tea Research

- Green Tea: from the University of Maryland Medical Center Alternative/Complementary Medicine library
- New Scientist, 20 March 2004
- Efficacy of a green tea extract rich in catechin polyphenols and caffeine in increasing 24-h energy expenditure and fat oxidation in humans -- Dulloo et al. 70 (6): 1040 -- American Journal of Clinical Nutrition [1]

• Fourth International Scientific Symposium on Tea & Human Health

  Trends in Food Science & Technology, 10(2), 199-204.

  [http://members.tripod.com/~hemochromatose/onderwerpen/teabbc]

• Bhagwat, T et al., "Flavonoid composition of tea: Comparison of black and green teas", USDA Agricultural Research Service

• FDA Issues Information for Consumers about Claims for Green Tea and Certain Cancers.

• Widlansky ME, Duffy SJ, Hamburg NM, Gokce N, Warden BA, Wiseman S, Keaney JF Jr, Frei B, Vita JA. Effects of black tea consumption on plasma

- http://findarticles.com/p/articles/mi_m0876/is_n56/ai_9164614

- Mason R. 200 mg of Zen; L-theanine boosts alpha waves, promotes alert relaxation. Alternative & Complementary Therapies 2001,April; 7:91-95

- Determination of catechins in matcha green tea by micellar electrokinetic chromatography. Weiss DJ, Anderton CR. Department of Chemistry, University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, Colorado Springs, CO 80918, USA. dweiss@uccs.edu